After five weeks of downtime, the Half-Gross Heroes are summoned to help once again. The Brotherhood of Victory has taken control over Algart. As the Prince's Regent, Sir Wymer commands the ear of the young prince. The next important thing is to close ranks and solidify the rule of the Brotherhood. Towards this end, Wymer will pay 1000 XP if the Half-Gross heroes can help win the loyalty of each of the Baronies and their Archons whose loyalty is seen as "shaky." Wymer will pay an additional 1500 XP to any who can prove that a royal house that is resisting the Brotherhood's Regency are actually controlled by forces outside of Algart, or are masquerading while in fact something different altogether such as a blood elf or Tentacloid.

Once Algart is secured, the Prince will once again turn toward the east. There is a dire threat that whatever drove Virkon down has returned and has turned its attention toward Algart.

During the downtime, the heroes take some time to make some things happen. Toby makes sneezing powder. Moonshadow purchases a magic weapon and meets with Archon Zebidee who has been un-petrified by the Mystic Union. He disguises Zebidee as his new apprentice "Angelo." Ivo travels back and forth to Idylwyld to consult with Renly. Walker spends the time spying in and around the city guard HQ. Balleth finds rumors by carousing, but not carousing "too much." Chummo works on some training.

Walker discovers that Lt. Wreckly seems to boss Marshall Stanley around. Walker follows Wreckly and discovers that he is part of an underground organization. Balleth learns that Lord Cedric Ravenswood, patron of the arts, is in debt.

The Half-Gross Heroes make their way to Naucastle. The Cyclopeans who defend Naucastle have been looking sickly. The human cavalry have been on an "extended patrol." They find that the castle is abandoned, and that the entire staff have been turned into thralls of Mugdulglub and plot against the new Prince from below the castle. The Half-Gross heroes descended into the bowels of that tower's cellars, found the Shuggoth that commanded the beasts, the Tentacloid that had replaced Archon Zebidee, and cleared all

Thomas makes level 4. The majority of the player characters make it to 8th level, except for dual class Moonshadow who makes 6th.
