The Pirate Bastards sail toward Santo Domingo. They are intercepted by two frigates. Despite no shots traded between the ships, they pass within 50 feet of each other to communicate. The Spanish ships want to make sure that the Pirate Bastards are not "cultists." They respond that they are not. However any conversation about cultists or religion is lost because the Pirate Bastards maneuver away from the Spanish ships.

The Pirate Bastards pass a miserable port village and almost mistaken it for Santo Domingo. However, it is the village of the Blue Oyster Cult. They continue toward the Spanish settlement.

Juan travels to the church of the Blessed Virgin of Guadulepe. There, he is welcomed as a savior after demonstrating the magic he receives from her. Juan returns and the scurvy crew travel to Rico Suave the jewelers to price the seven black pearls they found. The guards at the jewelers tell the pirates to "get lost" because they don't serve their kind.

Tadg leaves, but once out of sight begins to curse the guards. One by one they begin to collapse. They blame the pirates for the witchcraft and level their muskets, but the remainder are shot dead by the Pirate Bastards. They kidnap Rico Suave the jeweler and barely make it out of port with the ship taking a little bit of damage from the Santo Domingo guards shooting at them.

They learn from Rico Suave that collecting thirteen of the black pearls will allow someone to summon Davy Jones. Despite saying repeatedly that he "isn't with the cult" Rick knows a whole lot about the Blue Oyster Cult. They put Rico Suave in the brig.

They sail to the village of the Blue Oyster Cult. They start shooting at the blasphemous obelisk in the harbor, but the chaos attracts a legion of twisted, tortured sea gulls. They attack the Fiancee. Barrels organs are eaten. Jonathan's heart is torn out. Francois is killed and Edward is slain. Once the seagulls are stopped, Juan raises Edward and Barrels from the dead but Francois is turned into a zombie, and Red Eye shoots it before it can do more damage. The heroes attack the ghost ship, rousing it to fight back.

Next, the Pirate Bastards target the derelict ship in the harbor. However, they soon find it crawling with pirate ghosts. After a quick fight, they sink it with four cannonballs. Specs is killed but revived by Juan. Fingers is killed, and thrown off of the ship. He was terrible anyway. As the moon rises up, a gaggle of crazed cultists race from the village onto the shores and dance in a crazed and terrible way.
